

Executive Biography

Linda Lang Executive Director

Linda Lang is the executive director of the Arizona Association of Community Managers (AACM), a professional organization dedicated to promoting a positive understanding of community associations and their contribution to developing, establishing and maintaining high-quality, well-managed neighborhoods in Arizona. As executive director, Lang oversees the overall operation of the association, provides strategic leadership and facilitates the general direction of the association's growth. She assisted the organization in creating and funding its Hope Grant, a unique fund that provides assistance to Arizona homeowners and communities who experience financial hardship. Lang also is instrumental in lobbying for state laws protecting the rights of AACM members, community HOAs and Arizona homeowners.

Lang is a proven entrepreneur, founding her first business, a commercial concrete construction company located in Colorado, in 1977. Lang's entrepreneurial spirit led her to simultaneously start a second company, a Funny Car racing team. Auto racing has always been a passion of Langs, leading her to receive industry awards such as Colorado Funny Car Champion and the runner up for the National Hot Rod Association's Rookie Driver of the Year. Following her passion for business, Lang relocated to Arizona in 1992, where she became founder and CEO of her third company, Arizona Rotorcraft Inc., an authorized maintenance center for Rolls Royce Allison turbine aircraft engines.

Lang is active in the community working with professional business organizations such as Enterprise Network, where she serves on the board of directors as well as the sponsorship chair and board development. She's also heavily involved in several other community organizations, including: the ASU's Deans Advisory Committee for the College of Engineering, Chandler Gilbert Community College Aviation Advisory Board, Gilbert Planning and Zoning and the East Valley Institute Technology Aviation Committee.

Lang also is an outdoor adventurer and enjoys sharing her passions for golf, quad riding and camping with her grandchildren.
